Nep

The story of Nep begins in Daytona, Florida, a place of endless motorcycle rallies, sticky summers, and the kind of small-town culture she always knew she'd leave behind. It's that push and pull that fuels her debut album, Noelle – an album that feels both diaristic and cinematic: raw experience refracted through sharp, infectious indie-pop.

Nep has been building an audience for years, long before any records were even finished. Short clips and demos posted to TikTok racked up over 5 million likes, drawing fans to her mix of sardonic humor, brutal honesty, and a quirky charm that makes even her darkest songs feel oddly uplifting. She quickly translated that online energy to the stage, selling out early headline shows in Los Angeles, New York City, and Chicago, and touring alongside Ricky Montgomery, mxmtoon, grentperez, and Cameron Whitcomb. Her latest single 'peripheral' is out now, with new music scheduled for release in 2027.

In Nep's world, scars become anthems, heartbreak becomes punchlines, and growing up in Daytona becomes the stuff of unforgettable songs.
