Since the release of her last critically acclaimed and award winning album two years ago, LYDMOR has been touring intensely in Europe, the UK and Asia.

She's famous and even infamous for always delivering a magical cocktail of challenging visual shows and combining them with her mesmerizing conceptual electropop.

She's an artist who never compromises and who always goes her own way.

To some people's surprise, LYDMOR actually has a back catalogue of several releases, among them 'A Pile Of Empty Tapes' released in 2012, and 'Y' from 2015.

These albums had more traction abroad than nationally and created a dedicated international fan base.

In 2016, close to giving up her dream of playing music, then 26-year old Jenny Rossander, packed her bags and travelled alone to Shanghai. The personal journey and the inspiration she gained there, became the foundation for the story, that in September 2018 manifested itself in her breakthrough album "I told you I'd tell them our story".

Since then, it took off in earnest for LYDMOR, who in 2018-2019 toured in Asia, Russia, big parts of Europe and the UK and finished off 2019 with another tour in Asia.

In the beginning of 2021, CAPACITY is released. A contrastful musical piece, where reality and fiction melt together in a multifaceted sound universe.

It is the electronic popartist's most personal, complex and conceptual album to date.

LYDMOR always gives all she has - no matter if she plays festivals like Roskilde Festival, Tinderbox, Northside Festival, mystical venues in Hong Kong, Vietnam and Berlin, or showcase festivals like Reeperbahn Festival or Iceland Airwaves.
