

GRAMMY nominated singer-songwriter Madison Cunningham first picked up a guitar at age seven, and by the age of fifteen, decided to pursue her passion for songwriting, citing Joni Mitchell and Bob Dylan as key inspirations. Fast forward to 2022, the California native has a GRAMMY nominated debut album Who Are You Now (Verve Forecast), a follow-up GRAMMY nominated EP Wednesday, a late-night TV debut performance, and her first headline tour under her belt.

With her “voice reminiscent of Stevie Nicks” (WXPB’s The Key) and accolades comparing her to Fiona Apple (NPR Music), Jeff Buckley and Joni Mitchell (Rolling Stone Country), Cunningham has made an impression on her musical peers. Champions include John Mayer, Joe Jonas, Harry Styles – for whom she opened for at Madison Square Garden in Fall 2021 – Andrew Bird and more.

She has previously toured North America supporting the Punch Brothers, Amos Lee, Lake Street Dive, Calexico, and Iron & Wine, performed as a duet partner with Chris Tile on APM’s “Live From Here,” and recently appeared in and helped score Sara Bareilles’ television show Little Voice.
